

Technology transfer

The Food Chain works with companies from outside the Food and Drink sector to develop new uses for technology from other areas.

Technology transfer from the chemical industry has produced products with greatly reduced processing times, improved consistency and stability through new manufacturing processes.

Further details of this area of the Food Chain's work are available at G.Clayton@FoodChainCIC.co.uk

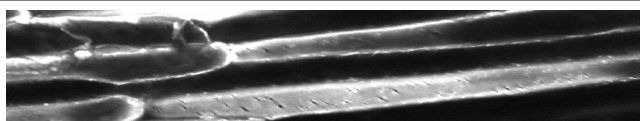

Shelf Life

Interested in checking or extending the shelf life of your product?

A shelf life check up from the CIC can:

- Give production efficiency cost benefits
- Reduce food waste volumes and costs
- Generate competitive product USPs
- Increase sales opportunities

Functional Foods Innovations

The Functional Food Forum (FFF) provides new ideas and generates R&D opportunities for food and drink companies.

The FFF brings industry representatives together with academics, researchers and scientists to create a driving force in the field of functional foods.

To find out about membership offers or for additional information contact FFF@FoodChainCIC.co.uk

Scandinavian Business Visit

The Food Chain, in conjunction with the Regional Development Agency Yorkshire Forward and RFGYH, recently organised a trip to Sweden and Finland to look at new developments in Functional Foods.

This taster visit is the forerunner of a larger visit planned for 2008. The 2008 visit will be to both companies and research labs in this area at the forefront of functional research.

Additional information about this visit is available at F.Lister@FoodChainCIC.co.uk

Food Industry Events

Take a look at the events section of the Food Chain's website which promotes a wide range of conferences and events relevant to those working within the food and drink sector.

Several hundred events are listed per year. This is a free service provided by the CIC to promote best practice in the food and drink sector. Free trials of logo links are available contact the Food Chain for details.
